

With a little help from his friends ...

By DEAN JONES
BEAN CITY — When Keith Hicks woke up with a sore throat in April neither he nor his family had any reason to believe it was the beginning of a long term illness once known as French Polio, that it would eventually cost thousands of dollars and that he would have the help and prayers of a lot of friends.

The disease, now known as Guillian Barre, is a virus that started with the sore throat. Keith woke up on April 27. His mother, Mrs. Hazel Hicks, said that shortly after breakfast that Sunday morning, "They were like water." Mrs. Hicks said, "Within a couple of hours he was having double vision and his speech was slurring so we rushed him to Glades General Hospital."

At Glades General, neither

Keith's doctor nor the hospital physician could diagnose the problem so they transferred him to Good Samaritan in West Palm Beach. By the next morning, he was in the Intensive Care Unit (ICU) where he has remained ever since.

By the second day, Keith was paralyzed from the throat down; unable to move his arms or legs, his breathing done for him by a respirator and taking nourishment intravenously.

Mrs. Hicks and her husband, Arley, found the good news was that while Gillian Barre struck a savage blow, the chances of 100 percent recovery for the virus' victims are excellent.

The bad news was that the recovery was going to take 12 to 18 months, bearing complications, and that a large amount of time would have to be spent in the hospital.

To complicate matters, Keith no longer came under his father's health and major medical insurance coverage. He had just been hired as a mechanic's helper in LaBelle but his insurance coverage at his place of employment wasn't due to start until May 15, leaving him between and between at the time he contracted the disease.

Mrs. Hicks said her son's hospital bills already amount to

But ALS is delayed hospital personnel get day care center

BELLE GLADE — In an attempt to solve a critical shortage of nurses and other medical personnel, the Glades General Hospital Board of Trustees decided Tuesday night to go to bids on a children's day care center.

The center, to occupy part of the old Memorial Wing, will be used to house children of employees while they're working at the hospital, according to Hospital Administrator Patrick Lennan.

Lennan said the hospital will absorb construction costs in getting the center ready for use, which he said would probably be in the range of $20,000 to $25,000, but the operational costs would be borne by the employees who will be using it.

The trustees agreed with Lennan when he suggested the construction contract should be one a time and materials basis, rather than calling for bids in total dollar amounts. He said much of the work, such as plumbing and electrical installation and painting, could be handled in-house.

"We've taken a survey of the staff," he told the trustees, "and 35-45 children's parents jumped at the opportunity. Some of the nurses can't wait so they can bring their children with them when they come to work."

Trustee Dudley Barnes said the center should help solve the shortage of nurses which has been plaguing Glades General, as well as virtually every other hospital in South Florida.

Lennan said he believes the center will help alleviate the shortage, not only by attracting new employees but in helping keep the employees already working at the hospital.

"I don't expect the hospital will ever recover the construction costs," Lennan said, "but the day-to-day operation will be paid 100 percent by the employees using the facility." He said the center will be open for 24 hours a day, although he didn't foresee very many children occupying it on the midnight shift.

Lennan informed the trustees the permit to operate a day care center has been approved by all the appropriate agencies and the next step is to have Belle Glade architect Chester Cone to draw up the specifications for the bidding process.

The trustees chose a special committee Tuesday night, consisting of Barnes, Trustee Clarence Pate and Vice-Chairman David Hill, to approve the specifications and guide the project through the bidding process.

Doubts were expressed as to whether it could be done but Lennan said he hopes to have the center open and in operation by the end of August, when a school begins.

Pahokee Council gets two windfalls

By ALISA DEWING
PAHOKEE — It was a good news night Tuesday for city commissioners who learned the city has $100,000 more in uncommitted funds due to an arithmetical error and that funding for major housing and street improvements totaling $5,242,000 has been budgeted by the Community Development Authority.

The error in arithmetic occurred in reporting the balance of funds approved by Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) available for renovations to the city's water treatment plant. The city's recently accepted a base bid of $379,700 to meet Department of Environmental Resources (DER) mandated repairs submitted by Widell Associates, Inc. of Fort Lauderdale. The city was acting on information that it had only a balance of $490,000 in FmHA funds to spend with the engineering fees yet to be paid.

Word of the CDA improve

City due $50,000

PAHOKEE — The city is due to receive $50,000 Monday, a share of state Housing Improvement Fund revenues, to install floating docks in the city marina.

Word that county commissioners had approved a share of the State funds, raised through boat registration fees and under the administration of the Parks and Recreation Department, was released by Commissioner Bill Bailey.

Bailey has been working with former mayor Duncan Padgett and Mayor Noma Norman in attempting to funnel this funding into the city's marina improvement program.

According to David Goodlett, assistant to Commissioner Bailey, further details were not yet available here as of Wednesday morning. However, he said the funds would be released July 1, the start of the state's fiscal year.

The floating docks will replace the stationary docks now in use and improve docking facilities impaired when the lake level was raised.

5th St. improvements eyed

BELLE GLADE — City Commissioners will decide Thursday night whether to accept a bid for street and sidewalk work to be done on Southwest Fifth Street, which is half again as high as anticipated.

The work, being done under the city's Community Development Program, was originally estimated to cost $100,000 but the city has advertised for bids twice and both times the only bidder was Rubin Construction Co. of West Palm Beach, both times in the amount of $155,448.

City Manager Robert Sanders told the commissioners Briley, Wild and Associates, the city's engineers, had recommended a postponement of any decision to give them a chance to make an additional review of the bid and compare it with bids on a similar project in a city on the east coast.

Community Development Director Roman Harvin endorsed the recommendation although he later said time was getting to be a critical factor because the target date for beginning the work was Oct. 18 and the three-week delay until the commissioners' next regular meeting would mean further delays.

After a motion by Commissioner Dorothy Walker to accept the recommendation failed for lack of a second, Commissioner Tom Altman noted this was the second time the city had gone to bids and both times the sole bidder had returned with the same bid.

Altman said he saw little to be gained by further study of the bid by the engineers but much to be lost by the three-week delay until the next regular meeting. He said he would favor further study only if the engineers come up with substantial changes.

After some discussion, Altman moved to postpone the decision until a special meeting Thursday night, in which the commissioners will discuss charter revision proposals being prepared for them.

The commission, after Harvin said further delay could jeopardize other Community Development projects now on the drawing boards, unanimously agreed.

The commission also directed Harvin to prepare a list of possible projects the city might attempt under a UDAD program which would be funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Harvin had earlier made a preliminary application, which he said was recently approved by HUD, for a 4-1 matching grant of $1.5 million. Harvin said he has been invited to prepare an application for a neighborhood or community project and has been informed the ceiling has now been lifted and the city could apply for a grant of $20 million or more, although he cautioned the commissioners about the 25 per cent matching requirement.

Nurses needed

BELLE GLADE — Beginning with the fall term Palm Beach Junior College Glades campus will initiate courses leading to the associate degree in nursing.

Some 43 prospective students, including a number of licensed practical nurses, attended the recent day-long information session conducted at PBJC-G by Betty Morgan, chairman of the college's nursing department, and indicated they would enroll in the program if it is offered here.

According to Dr. Cecil Connelly, PBJC provost, the curriculum will begin with anatomy and physiology courses to be taught next fall on the local campus. Students will be able to take their first year of studies at the Glades campus before transferring to the central campus for advanced studies and hospital-based courses, after the program is established.

Although the curriculum is set up as a two-year program, few students are able to complete it in that time, Mrs. Morgan said, because it is a difficult course. "However," she pointed out that "most students who get through the first year do finish."

City baseball clinic starts Monday

BELLE GLADE—A city-sponsored baseball clinic for youngsters between the ages of six and 11 years will begin Monday, with morning sessions to be at Airport Park and afternoon sessions set for Lake Shore Park.

City Recreation Coordinator Jane Williams said Mike Underwood, owner of All Pro Sporting Goods and Physical Education instructor at Glades Day School, has agreed to instruct the clinic, which will last from June 30 until July 11, with a day off for July Fourth.

Mrs. Williams said Underwood would be assisted by city recreational staff members. She said the participating youngsters will be divided into different age groups.

The first week will be dedicated to the fundamentals of baseball and the second week to games. The cost of the program depends on the number of participants, she said, but Underwood's wages will be $300 for the two weeks.

Mrs. Williams also noted the clinic was designed to end one day before the Pitch, Hit and Run contest, the city is co-sponsoring with Burger King, "and I feel this would be a good beginning for our youth baseball program scheduled to begin in 1981."

Softball program starts

BELLE GLADE—The City of Belle Glade started its Men's Softball Season on June 10. There are 18 teams participating, five returning from last year and eight making their debut.

On June 10, the All-Stars, with a total of 10 hits, beat L-8 Lettuce by a score of 15-6. Bonavia Chevrolet was also able to beat Quaker Oats with a score of 18-5.

On June 11, EPE defeated Community Methodist Church 19-2. EPE compiled a whopping 19 hits. Also that night, South Bay Growers beat the Glades Merchants 11-1.

presented by three specialists treating Keith.

She said she has applied for Social Security and Medicaid but she didn't know when it would begin or how much it would bring in.

Friends didn't wait to begin showing their concern, however, and the Rev. Robert Atkins of First Baptist Church in Belle Glade, where the Hicks are members, said the congregation of the church began a Keith Hicks Fund at the Bank of Belle Glade the second week in May.

Rev. Atkins said there is approximately $2,500 in the fund now but he said he feels sure more donations would be received if more people understand the need and know the fund is there for donations.

He said more information on how to make the donations can be obtained by calling the church.

Mrs. Hicks said this week Keith's condition is much improved over what it was when he entered the hospital; that he can now move his arms and legs freely and he's now off the respirator, although he's still breathing through his tracheotomy.

"He's supposed to be taken out of ICU within the next couple of weeks," she said, "and while he'll still be in the hospital, we feel that's so much better than what he's been. It's almost like he'll be coming home." She said she had no idea yet when Keith would be coming home.

Both Keith's parents had been working at the time he contracted the virus, his father as a welder at Duda Farms and his mother in the produce buying department of Safeway Stores, but his mother said she had been staying many nights at the hospital. She said she would return to work when Keith gets better.

Once Keith is recovered, Mrs. Hicks said she has little doubt he will do what he had planned before he entered the hospital. That is to enroll at West Tech Center as an automotive mechanics student.

"That's all he's ever wanted to do," she said. "He went to Christian Day School but he fooled around and didn't get his diploma. He went back to night school and he got his diploma in December and we told him we'd get him through West Tech."

Curiosity seeker restraint needed

All people are excited by a fire and naturally curious as to the location, extent of damage and who or what it strikes.

But all too often, curiosity seekers who flock to the scene hamper, or at least complicate, the ability of fire fighters and other safety personnel who are trying to save property and possibly lives.

They do this in the most innocent of ways. Think, for example, of fire trucks, ambulances and patrol cars that have to dodge, pass or drive behind civilian vehicles trying to get to the scene while there is still something to see.

So many times, the curious place themselves in dangerous positions by getting too close to the flame.

A case in point was a recent fire Thursday night, June 19, on South St. 22 near Feida. A fire had started where many cans, drums and tanks, some filled with gasoline, and others containing diesel fuel, oil and other petroleum products, were stored.

A number of explosions occurred, any one of which would have inflicted serious injury had it made contact with a bystander.

At the Thursday fire, firemen had to walk around people or tell them to get out of the way in an area that was already precarious, explosive if you will, because of the late hour, heavy traffic and dangerous substance on fire.

While we are not condemning anyone for their actions, we do call on all people in cases of fire, or other emergencies, to yield to the good judgment and expertise of our local safety officials.

"YOUR TURN..."

Castro scores on Carter

No one at the White House or the State Department was to admit it, of course, but the truth is that Fidel Castro has been running up the score on a befuddled Jimmy Carter. Incredibly, Castro has accomplished this by manipulating what should have been an unqualified political disaster for Havana — the exodus of more than 112,000 Cuban refugees since April 20.

For most of the time since then, Castro has deftly controlled the play in his confrontation with Washington. He deliberately refused to permit diversion of any significant number of refugees to other nations in the Western Hemisphere. Just as deliberately, he rebuffed every effort to establish, in Cuba, a suitable American screening process that would have imposed a measure of order and legality. And finally, he exploited the refugee exodus to rid himself of assorted criminals and other social undesirables.

In the face of all this, Mr. Carter appeared ever more helpless and inept. His initial efforts to halt the "freedom flotilla" proved embarrassingly futile. Unable to stem the flood at the present point, he claimed that the refugees would be welcomed with "an open heart and open arms." This declaration was followed shortly by another attempt to choke off the parade of boats from Mariel by fining boat owners and impounding their vessels. Since enforcement of this policy began, more than 20,000 additional Cubans have arrived in Miami.

If the flood of refugees has now diminished to a trickle, it is primarily because Castro himself has turned off the spigot. Nevertheless, it is Jimmy Carter who winds up looking both callous and ineffectual.

But even at this late date, the president still has a chance to demonstrate a will of resolve in dealing with the calculating Castro. International law is quite clear on the subject of Country A dumping 'its common criminals on the doorstep of Country B: the practice violates every accepted standard.

There being no international agency capable of enforcing this writ, Mr. Carter has every right to assume the responsibility himself.

According to the latest State Department count, 8,224 of the present political backgrounds have been discovered among the 112,534 refugees who have arrived to date. Of these, 677 are considered hardened criminals guilty of acts which would constitute felonies in the United States. When screening is completed on all the Cubans, the number of hardened criminals may rise to double or triple the current figure.

Thus, even if the administration excuses the hungry kids who stole chickens and the unemployed adults convicted of petty black market dealings, there are likely to be as many as 2,000 Cubans ineligible for political asylum on any grounds.

Failure to deport these criminals would do more than impose unwarranted burdens or even dangers on the American people. It would also diminish further the already shrinking support for granting asylum to any political refugees, no matter how deserving.

So, Mr. Carter should demand that Fidel Castro accept the return of hardened criminals. In the likely event that Carter ought to see to it that they end up in Cuba anyway, even if they have to be pushed through the gate at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base.

Among those who have jumped into the race are Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter, State Senator Kenneth McKay, Tampa oil distributor Jim Williams, Glades Countyman John B. Coffey, and of course, Richard Stone — all Democrats. On the Republican side are former state representative Andrew Crumshaw, Ocala attorney Lewis Dinkins, former Congressman Lou Frey,

Voters have choice in election

1980 is shaping up as a banner election year. Not only are many important offices being decided, but many candidates are contending for the offices.

This competition is apparent all the way from the race for the presidency to many local races. So you believe that Ronnie Reagan and Jimmy Carter offer only a choice of lesser evils? Not true. All of us voters helped give the two finalists a position of strength going into the conventions. Among those who rejected this year were John Connally, Howard Baker, George Bush and Ted Kennedy.

Time is getting short for the local races, but more candidates can be expected to join some of the crowded fields.

One of the most crowded races is the one for U.S. Senate. Many think incumbent Richard Stone is vulnerable.

Among those who have jumped into the race are Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter, State Senator Kenneth McKay, Tampa oil distributor Jim Williams, Glades Countyman John B. Coffey, and of course, Richard Stone — all Democrats. On the Republican side are former state representative Andrew Crumshaw, Ocala attorney Lewis Dinkins, former Congressman Lou Frey, former Public Service Commission Member Paula Hawkins, Miami attorney Ellis Rubin, and State Senator John Ware. There is a wide range of talents and personalities competing for Stone's job. There is a choice.

All Congressional seats in Florida are up for grabs. All odd-numbered state senate seats are up for reelection. Some familiar faces, such as State Senate-Phil Lewis, will not be returning. The widely respected Lewis has decided not to seek reelection.

All members of the state house of representatives are up for reelection this year.

Voters will decide on the retention of six justices of the Florida Supreme Court, and two judges of the district court of appeals, Second Appellate Court District.

Circuit Court Judges from the 15th and 20th Circuits face voters again this year.

Six county judges in Palm Beach County and one each in Hendry and Glades Counties face reelection campaigns this year. The state attorney for the 15th Circuit is also up for reelection.

Some county commission and school board seats are up for election, and virtually all of the court house offices will have to be renewed this

In Glades County, six candidates have jumped into the race for sheriff.

Other constitutional offices to be decided include clerks of circuit court, property appraisers, tax collectors, and district superintendents of schools.

Two seats are up for reelection on the Belle Glade City Commission this year and one seat of the Moore Haven Mosquito Control District is open. The City of LaBelle would have had a city commission election this year, but the lack of challengers put the incumbents back into office without opposition.

The City of Clewiston has no commission races this year and the race in Pahokee was settled earlier this year.

So except for a few exceptions — primarily at the city level — there is plenty of political action this year. Many of the local level candidates have not yet announced their candidacy so more entrants in the election sweepstakes can be anticipated.

The dates to remember are Sept. 9 for the primary, Oct. 7 for the second primary, and Nov. 4 for the general election.

U. S. depends on OPEC, OPEC depends on us

When a cartel is controlling the market in a vital commodity, any sign of a faltering out among members of the cartel takes on the luster of good news. The failure of the Organizations of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reach a unanimous agreement on a new price formula for oil is such a straw.

But it is grasping only at a straw to take comfort in the disunity evident at the OPEC meeting in Algiers. True, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates refused to go along, at least for now, with a new "benchmark" price of $32 a barrel for oil — $2 higher than the previous price. This is music to Western ears, but the fact remains that the other 11 exporters are determined to squeeze still more dollars out of our pockets.

The $2 price increase is expected to add two to three cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline in the United States and have a corresponding effect on utility bills and all other prices sensitive to the cost of fuel. We have no choice but to pay the higher prices as long as we choose to send abroad for tankers full of oil.

That choice is the joker in the deck, a card which cannot be played as long as the demand for oil by the importing nations remains as high or higher than OPEC's production levels. Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, may have been thinking of that wild card when he warned the exporters that a worldwide oil glut by next fall could undermine the ability of OPEC to sustain its $32 a barrel price.

The OPEC ministers still hope to "unify" their prices at their next meeting in September. The ministers who are the most hawkish on prices may hope to unify them at an even higher level than the present range, which goes from the Saudi's $28 up to $37 at the top. To do so in the face of falling demand would be difficult — unless OPEC takes the more drastic step of cutting back on production.

There are significant forces at play in the world energy market. Even discounting the temporary effects of recession, the inexorable upward curve in petroleum demand has been tempered. Europe and Japan are mounting major nuclear power programs. Although nuclear development remains virtually frozen in America, some thing resembling an energy policy is finally emerging from years of fitful debate in Congress.

Our dependence on OPEC oil is still great enough to be our overriding energy problem, a serious drain on our economy and a threat to peace. But the progress made so far in curbing that dependence should encourage our efforts. A year ago imported oil was meeting 42 percent of our requirements. Today the figure is 37 percent. I can go significantly lower. To the extent that it does, the less we'll have to worry about what OPEC does or doesn't decide to do.

Dear Editor:

I am very appreciative of your efforts and your articles on the SR 80 situation. I have been trying to get something done about the road for two years.

I just recently contacted the head of the state road department through a messenger from Gov. Bob Graham's office. I have since received no word about the schedule for resurfacing.

I hope you can get the fine citizens of this community to rally around a community-wide effort to get our message across.

Western unity needed

(Reprinted by permission of The Sacramento Bee)

The Western alliance, it is said, isn't what it used to be, but there has also been often said it is probably never was. Nonetheless, the current state of disarray — most obviously on sanctions against Iran and on responses to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan — reflect fundamental differences in perception and concern which, if they are not resolved, can only exacerbate problems on both sides of the Atlantic and lead the West into greater danger.

On this side of the water, Congress appears to act as if the only threat to national security is vaguely military while, on the other, most members of the European Economic Community are behaving as if there were no serious threat from the Soviet Union at all. Similarly, this country continues to be unwilling to make adequate reductions in its dependency on imported oil while the Europeans, necessarily much more dependent than we are, seem to be incapable of doing anything that might carry even remote dangers interrupting that supply or otherwise jeopardizing the economic prosperity that many of them now enjoy.

Obviously, both positions reflect domineering political constancy of the narrowest sort. Just as obviously, there cannot be much progress on one side of the water unless there is expectation of help from the other.

The fact is that security, whether "national" — that is, American — or Western, cannot rest alone either on the great and often ill-considered heap of defense dollars that which Congress now seems committed, or, on the other hand, on the pretense, prevalent throughout much of Western Europe, that the Russians are interested only in détente and trade and that Afghanistan (for example) means nothing. On both counts the alliance is hampered by an internationalism often too selective and self-serving to be worthy of the name.

President Carter will have an opportunity to do a little fence-mending when he goes to the economic summit meeting in Venice this month, but the more fundamental problems and disagreements will take a lot more work both abroad and at home.

The point here is simple:

We are all going too much on our own way, a fact against which any call for alliance and unity looks at least in part like a contradiction. It is still a case of having to hang together, lest we all have to do it separately.

Employers air complaints to state agency reps

Tallahassee is getting the message that Glades area employers want some changes made in the state law covering unemployment benefits and employment practices.

The latest officials to get the word were two state employment service representatives in town last Thursday to meet with local businessmen. They came, they said, in response to letters and newspaper articles sent to Sen. Phil Lewis regarding the Glades area protest movement.

The protest, spearheaded by Roy Rausch, manager of the local Labor Force office, seeks legislative remedies to alleged abuses in state employment and benefit practices and advocates withholding quarterly payments to the state pending some action.

On hand for the meeting at City Hall were James Welch, field supervisor Florida Unemployment Compensation, and Janet Chapman, field supervisor for Employment Service.

For about two hours the field supervisors fielded questions and listened to businessmen relate specific instances such as part-time employees simultaneously collecting unemployment benefits; employees quitting jobs to go on extended vacations; and refusing preferred employment in order to receive unemployment benefits; employees fired for such causes as stealing or being drunk on the job; reentering unemployment compensation which is charged back to the employer.

Among the charges were Milton Carpenter, head of an insurance firm; Frank Anderson, city finance director; and Rausch.

Also attending were four men representing Unemployment Compensation Advisory Corp., a firm which represents employers on compensation cases.

Stating that "the law is complex unless you fully understand it," Welch told the businessmen that there are "checks and balances to prevent abuse." The state doesn't have the funds or manpower to investigate every case but does make "periodic cross checks," he said.

"If you have information regarding a claimant, you have to let us know," Welch said. Rausch related an incident in which an employee's records were requested by the state in order to process a compensation claim after the employee had advised Rausch he was going out-of-state on vacation. Rausch said he had a job for the man and told him so. In returning the state forms Rausch said he wrote what he knew across the face of the form, indicating he had work for the man. And still the compensation claim was paid, Rausch complained.

Claiming that it is not always feasible to require someone to return from another state to take employment, Welch asked, "Do you have enough jobs in Belle Glade to put all these people to work during the off-season?"

Other employer problems to surface during the session included the paycheck regulation. When a claim is made for unemployment compensation a previous employer's account can be charged although the claimant has subsequently left that employer and worked somewhere else. The charge is made to the employer named during four quarters of a five-quarter period.

Rausch also protested a provision which he says allows a worker to claim a specialty occupation such as "an auto racing-stripe painter" when, in fact, he may be fully experienced in all phases of paint and body work.

Mrs. Chapman maintained that applicants are required to list their three most significant occupations and that the employment literature elicits additional information.

The session was more-or-less summed up by Carpenter who said, "This is what we want you to take back to Tallahassee - what we are concerned about as business people. There are definite inequalities in the law itself."

Earlier Thursday, Rausch spoke at a meeting of the Pahoekes Rotary Club where he asked members to submit any facts they have on abuses of the unemployment and compensation benefit program to him to be forwarded to state legislators.

"I'm not against people who need the help, just people who abuse it," he said. "People who deserve it should get even more help than they do."

"Let's tell the government, I'm dissatisfied with your service and I'm not paying just the same as any number of men who don't pay it but get satisfaction."

OVERSEEING THE GLADES CENTER of Planned Parenthood is Judy Oakley who became interested in pregnancy counselling while earning her master's degree at the University of North Carolina and first worked as a volunteer counsellor with the organization.

Planned Parenthood deals with Facts of life

By Alisa Dewing

While the moralists, the economists, the sociologists and the world-at-large debate the great issues of population growth, right-to-life and women's civil rights, one group goes on quietly and firmly dealing with all the attendant problems on a one-to-one basis. Planned Parenthood. It deals with the facts of life, and with the individuals whose lives are being affected here and now. The pregnant and unmarried teenage girl. The married woman and her husband seeking information about birth control. Education, counselling, medical help, and referral service to all those who seek it.

In Belle Glade the path leads to an old converted house at 141 NW 2nd St. where the Planned Parenthood Glades Center is located, presided over by Judy Oakley as director.

In two years this efficient young woman has steered the local Planned Parenthood program from a two-room second-floor office, where services were limited to providing education and counselling, to the present two-story quarters, big enough to provide clinical medical help as well.

After starting with the volunteer help of local physicians, the clinic is now served by two regularly-scheduled physicians, Drs. William Bartley and Pamela Graber who also serve the county health department.

Here women of child-bearing age can receive gynecological examinations at about half the cost of a private physician's fee and purchase birth control devices far below the usual retail price. They can get an immediate answer to the question: Am I pregnant? And help in solving, what for some can be the even bigger question: What should I do now?

And even though the clinical costs are nominal they are also provided free through federal funding to those unable to pay.

But there is one requirement of all who seek aid through Planned Parenthood and that is a 20-minute education and counselling session on birth control methods.

"It's unique," as described by Miss Oakley, in that it provides information that most women - and men also - don't even know is available.

The problem of the pregnant teenage girl is a familiar one at Planned Parenthood at a time that teenage pregnancy is reaching significant numbers throughout the nation.

And a concomitant problem for the 15 to 24-year-old group is venereal disease, specifically gonorrhea, according to Miss Oakley.

A major factor in being able to help teenagers is that "by law we can see anyone of any age and no parental consent is needed," says Judy.

"We are not encouraging teenagers to learn birth control methods so they can be promiscuous," she points out. "The fact is that studies show that six-to-12 months before a teenager goes to a clinic they have already been sexually active."

"Lots of adults don't want to think that way about their children," she adds.

On the other hand, some parents bring their younger daughters to Planned Parenthood as a preventive measure, she says.

The seriousness of teenage pregnancies apparently cannot be overstated in that they present a danger both to the young mother and the child.

"The rate of premature and low-weight babies is high among teenage mothers with the attendant risk of mental retardation for low-weight babies, she points out.

Toxemia is an added threat for the adolescent mother and for girls 16 and younger, whose reproductive organs have not matured, there is the added likelihood of a scarred cervix leading to future miscarriages.

The philosophy of Planned Parenthood is that no woman should either have to have an abortion or bear an unwanted child, when birth control are so readily available.

But a part of the organization's counselling is helping the pregnant woman come to a decision about what she wants to do.

Planned Parenthood staff members do not arrange abortions. "If a woman is firm in her decision, we will discuss the various aspects, including the religious, and we will provide referrals but she must make the phone call," explains Miss Oakley.

Also, the agency will also help the mother-to-be place an unwanted child for adoption.

The primary goal of the Glades agency at this time is to reach more members of the surrounding communities.

Although the weekly clinics serve about 60 women a month in pregnancy tests and physical examinations,

"there are some 2,500 women whose needs are not being met in the area from Clewiston to South Bay to Pahokee - the area we serve," says Judy.

Although most women who come to Planned Parenthood learn of it by word-of-mouth through friends, there is an ongoing community awareness campaign.

Miss Oakley is an enthusiastic speaker to any group willing to listen, be it youth groups, women's clubs or civic organizations.

And if there is a need to serve more people, there is also a need for more volunteer help.

Assisting Judy Oakley on the center's staff are Lolly Castro, who is bilingual and helps coordinate the various activities, and LaVerne Martin, who serves as receptionist.

Four volunteers, however, conduct the clinical interviews and if more can be recruited, the community outreach program can be extended both to spread the message and raise funds to expand services.

As an affiliate of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc., the local center is partially funded by Title XX funds, augmented by foundation grants, donations, and patient fees.

The volunteers also include the men and women who serve on the local advisory committee and the county board of directors.

Included among them are Ruth Wedgworth and LaVoise Taylor, who serve on both governing bodies, and those who serve only on the advisory committee: Mrs. Elijah Baines of Pahokee; Margaret Mosley, Betty Thibault, Shirley Spinks, Jane Hart, the Rev. Leon Canal, Jr., Thomas Montgomery, Dr. Naomi Conley, Betty Koreen and Trisha Blash, all of Belle Glade, and H.W. Berryman, a former Belle Glade resident now living in West Palm Beach.

PREGNANCY testing is quick, 98 percent efficient and low-cost at the center. It takes two minutes using a UCG slide and clients are charged $1 for the service.

Winning state recipes in 'Dairy Days' contest

The top three winning recipes in the statewide "Dairy Days" recipe contest have been released by Arlen C. Jones, Palm Beach County extension home economics agent.

Winner in the "dessert" category at the grand cook-off was Mrs. Joan Diamond of Boca Raton whose recipe for "Joan's Fabulous Fruit Tarts" was published in the Herald Observer after she was named one of three county winners.

Also a winner in the county cook-off, conducted by the extension service, was Diane Williams of Belle Glade, whose recipe for "Broccoli Cream Almond Soup" was also published earlier.

As grand winner, Mrs. Diamond competed with 14 finalists selected from 1,000 participants in county contests, and was awarded $1,000 as overall winner plus $200 for her product.

The other state winners were Nancy Statler of Holmes County and Jackie Nelson of Orange County whose prize-winning recipes appear below.

Mrs. Statler's recipe, "Lasagna Spinach Bundles," won in the "Casserole and Main Dish Meals Category." Mrs. Nelson's "Tomatoes Stuffed with Summer and Zucchini Squash" was winner in the "Vegetable or Salad" category.

FROM THE GRAPEVINE

By BRENDA BUNTING

I've come to the conclusion that the world is made up of two distinct classes of people. (And all this time you thought there were three.)

They consist of the Doers and the Watch-un Doers. You can guess to what group I belong.

After spending an enlightening weekend with some friends a while back, it was brought home to me painfully, to which of the two groups I belonged.

When I got up at 9 a.m., she had been up since 6:30 a.m. I stumbled out of bed and groped for the bathroom only to be blinded momentarily by the shining chrome and the light reflecting off the sparkling fixtures. Seems my friend makes sure she is the last one to take a bath at night so she can scrub the tub, sno-bowl the stool and rinse out the sink before retiring for the night.

I reach for my toothbrush and then regret the thought. I just couldn't spit toothpaste in that nice clean sink.

Oh, for a cup of coffee! When I get to the kitchen she is putting the finishing touches on a chocolate cake she just baked for the church rummage sale.

Would I care for some breakfast? There's homemade biscuits, gravy, bacon and eggs. Ugh! Just coffee please.

She is already dressed for the day but I don't plan to budge out of my housecoat till a decent hour, at least 11 a.m.

I can't stand all that cheerful singing so I've decided to sneak back to bed for a few more winks. Lo and behold, the bed is made and my dirty clothes are no longer lying by the bed. I cautiously pull back the top cover, and just as I suspected, even the sheets are smooth and unrumpled. Guess that settles that. I'm up for the day.

What would I like to do today? she asks. Go back to bed, me thinks. Well, since I don't work, (HA!) she says, why don't we spend the day doing something that you as a working woman don't normally get to do? (What could she possibly have in mind?)

The lunch is packed and the bicycles stand waiting. A three-mile ride to the park with a 15 m.p.h. wind blowing us in the face. Oh, no - I'll never make it.

"Isn't this fun?", she chirps. Ya, fun (pant, pant.)

Down the hill and who into the park. We make it! I fling myself onto the grass, never to move again. No, I don't want to look at the birds. Nor do I care to eat the scrumptious lunch. I'm too tired. I may never eat again, ride a bicycle again, or for that matter, want to see her again.

By the time the weekend is over, the depression runs deep. She has cleaned, baked, invented, created and worked her way through all my patience. This Watch-un Doer is ready to go home...and sleep and sleep....

Taking it From the Top

By REV. DAVID T. EVANS
Everglades Presbyterian Church

Life is invaluable and beyond description. Life may be that vital physical or spiritual quality which distinguishes it from inorganic matter. Life may be existence which includes breathing and thinking. Life may be the dynamic result of a human being in action.

John the Apostle writes, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God; all things were made through Him, and with Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was Life, and the Life was the light of man."

When we go back to the beginning of all things we find God. The writer of Genesis rightly states, "In the beginning God..." The anochs is one of the simplest forms of life but it didn't just appear; it was created.

Life is from God, being created by Him. Life originates with God and has its purpose in God and its culmination in Him.

All of this may be considered as the area for theologians to discuss but the fact remains God is life. Whether or not we realize God is the creator and giver of life which has meaning, we must acknowledge that without fellowship or a close relationship with God which comes through Jesus Christ, we are hopeless and helpless.

The fellowship of Jesus Christ is the uniting of believing in worship, meaningful experience with service for and the fulfilling of His mission. Those who accept Christ as the living demonstration of God are compelled to join others in these kinds of relationships. Those who have a common belief and goal wish to give joyous expression to their thankfulness. This results in praise and worship of the One whom they feel is worthy of worship.

Out of the worship comes the desire to follow in the footsteps of our Lord. Service is the outcome and the result of the compassion of Christ showed for those about Him. We cannot believe in a loving and merciful God without wanting to act in loving and caring ways for others.

The final step is one which we are compelled to do—telling others that God is life, and fellowship is the way to eternal satisfaction and fulfillment.

Someone who has heard of and experienced God who is life is compelled to do something about it.

If you truly believe that God is life and you have realized the greatness of God.

Peter writes, "For we did not follow cleverly devised myths when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but we were eyewitnesses of his majesty."

The reality of Jesus Christ in the lives of John and Peter can not be doubted. For that which they write is also that which they so compassionately and compellingly proclaimed.

Can we follow their example? It seems we cannot but try!

McAllisters mark 50th anniversary

BELLE GLADE — S. M. and Aleene McAllister of 900 NW 12th St. will be honored at a reception celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary on Sunday, July 6, from 2 to 5 p.m. at the First Baptist Church social hall.

Residents of the Glades area since 1939, Mr. and Mrs. "Mac" have been active in business, civic and church affairs since coming to Florida from Ashburn, Ga.

McAllister was the first police chief of South Bay when it incorporated in 1941 and owned and operated a Route 27 service station for many years.

A carpenter and construction worker, he helped to build the Royal's store on Avenue A and was involved with the construction of Route 27 from South Bay to Miami.

Aleene McAllister owned and managed a fish market in South Bay and later, Aleene's Gifts on West Avenue A.

Over the years she was employed in several stores, including H.C. Willis & Sons.

As members of the First Baptist Church, they are active in the Senior Citizens' Young at Heart Club.

S.M. is a deacon, church treasurer, and maintenance supervisor as well as serving as stewardship chairman of the Big Lake Baptist Association.

Mrs. McAllister teaches a girls Sunday School class, is president of a women's mission group and sings in the church choir. She also finds time to be president of the Belle Glade Garden Club.

In civic affairs, S.M. is a member of the city's zoning committee and chairman of the Chamber of Commerce beautification committee.

The spare time is filled with hobbies — Aleene's are sewing and handicrafts, and S.M.'s are woodcraft and saw sharpening. Both enjoy gardening.

Helping the McAllisters celebrate their golden anniversary will be their three daughters, Ulva Taylor and Frances Neils both of Belle Glade and Eunice Patureau of Fort Charlotte, along with ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

No invitations are being sent. All the McAllisters' friends are invited to attend. The couple requests that no gifts be made. "Our family and friends are our greatest gift and we request no other gift but your presence with us or your prayers for us on this special occasion."

FACTS & FIGURES

According to the Bureau of the Census, there are over 15 million Americans who are under five years old.

Fisher-Pricer, now in its 50th year. Last year parents bought four Fisher-Pricer toys for every newborn child. Many parents consider such toys as educational as their youngsters find them entertaining.

The under-five set in America today make up seven percent of the population - about half what they were a century ago.

IT'S A FACT!

Intercity buses serve some 15,000 American communities. All but about a thousand of these have no other form of public transportation.

THEN... NOW!

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Popular mixed drink has an affinity for memorable names - though their origins may be hazy.

Some are named for people, mythical and otherwise. Bloody Mary and Tom Collins. Some for objects. Screwdriver and Gimlet. Others like the Manhattan and the Daiquiri are named with a geographical bent.

The Daiquiri is named for a Cuban mining town so small, it is no longer on the map. Yet the name lives on in times of day by delighted imbibers. The drink has even found its way into a bottled cocktail version under the Heublein label.

It was an American mining engineer, J. B. Oso, who discovered the "native" drink while stationed in Cuba about 1900. Oso, he named the drink after the rum-sugar-and-lime juice drink in the Venus Hotel in Santiago de Cuba and of his tour of duty, he brought the drink back to variations on a theme. "Daiquiri!" after the time-mining town he worked in.

The Daiquiri lends itself to variations on a theme. Everything from apricots to passion fruit has been added to the basic recipe to create new Daiquiri flavors.

Variations on a drink theme have opened another chapter in the Daiquiri's history: the recent marketing of ready-made Daiquiri mix several flavors that can be poured directly from the bottle. Available for many years in Heublein's prepared cocktails, the company has now introduced the original Daiquiri in a series of new, ready-to-pour flavors - banana, peach, strawberry, pineapple - containing Caribbean rum and natural fruit flavorings.

Today, a leading bartender in the Daiquiri recipe - many of which may have been concocted by the late President Kennedy, reportedly one of the most prominent Daiquiri connoisseurs.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS TO REDUCE IMPACT OF FLOOD DISASTER

Even a gentle rain continuing over several days can cause flooding in areas around normally placid streams.

Royal Insurance and its independent agents and brokers remind you that there are precautions homeowners and auto travelers in flood-prone areas can take to prevent loss of life and property when emergency conditions arise.

First of all, listen to your radio for up-to-date information on flooding. You should park your car on the highest ground available and be ready to leave the area at first warning to evacuate. You should also be familiar with alternate routes of escape in case your usual roads are closed because of flooding.

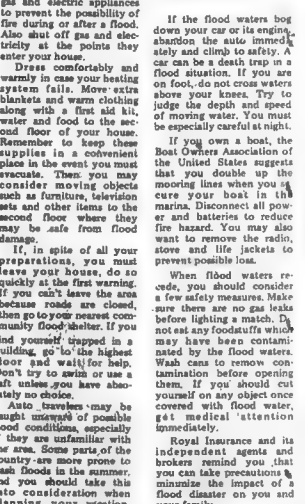

If flood waters are expected to reach your house, turn off the electricity and gas and electric appliances to prevent the possibility of fire during or after a flood. Also shut off gas and electricity at the points they enter your house.

Dress comfortably and warmly in case your heating system fails. Move extra blankets and warm clothing along with a first aid kit, water and food to the second floor of your house. Remember to keep these supplies in a convenient place in the event you must evacuate. Then you may consider moving objects such as furniture, television sets and other items to the second floor where they are safe from flood damage.

If, in spite of all your preparations, you must leave your house, do so quickly at the first warning. If you can't leave the area because roads are closed, then go to your nearest community flood shelter. If you flood yourself trapped in a building, go to the highest floor and wait for help. Don't try to swim or use a raft unless you have absolutely no choice.

Auto travelers may be caught unawares if possible flood conditions, especially if they are unfamiliar with the area. Some parts of the country are more prone to flash floods in the summer, and you should take this into consideration when planning your vacation. Flash floods occur when a large amount of rain falls in a short time over a small area causing rivers, streams and ravines to overflow. You can take to provide for your safety.

- Listen to weather reports on your car radio.
- Watch local streams for signs of sudden, rising water or a rapid increase in water speed.
- Check the sky for cumulonimbus clouds which look dark and threatening and semi-circular when viewed from below and bright when seen from the side at a distance. If they appear to be within 10 miles of your location, be prepared to move to higher ground if necessary.
- You should be familiar enough with the area to know how to get to high ground immediately.
- If the flood waters bog down your car or its engine, abandon the auto immediately and climb to higher ground. A car can be a death trap in a flood situation. If you are on foot, do not cross waters above your knees. Try to judge the depth and speed of moving water. You must be especially careful at night.
- If you own a boat, the Boat Owners Association of the United States suggests that you double up the mooring lines when you secure your boat in the marina. Disconnect all power and batteries to reduce fire hazard. You may also want to remove the radio, stove and life jackets to prevent possible loss.
- When flood waters recede, you should consider a few safety measures. Make sure there are no gas leaks before lighting a match. Do not eat any foodstuffs which may have been contaminated by the flood waters. Wash cans to remove contamination before use. If you should cut yourself on any object - concrete, wire, flood water, get medical attention immediately.
- Royal Insurance and its independent agents and brokers remind you that you can take precautions to reduce the impact of a flood disaster on you and your family.

IT'S A FACT!

Intercity buses serve some 15,000 American communities. All but about a thousand of these have no other form of public transportation.

Hospital

In another area of business, Lennon told the trustees another goal had not been met in connection with the beginning of Advanced Life Support (ALS) ambulance service because a county-wide communications system, "won't work."

Pressure was applied to the hospital a year ago, partially by Palm Beach County Medical Services Director Paul Mellei, Lennon recalled, to begin providing ALS rather than Basic Life Support (BLS) service then being provided by Terry Moss.

The trustees, after several meetings which included presentations by Moss and two other ambulance service operators, decided to provide ALS as soon as a communications net had been provided by the county. They decided however, to begin providing their own service with in-house ambulances.

The trustees also hired, in December, an emergency services director for the hospital, who would provide supervision to paramedics in the field from his post at the hospital. Lennon said Tuesday the hospital has already purchased the communications equipment it needs, including telemetry equipment, to go into ALS operation, and the personnel are available.

The holdup now, he said, is that the complicated radio and telephone network which Mellei said would be in operation by June 15 still isn't working. Lennon said he has attended three meetings in which explanations were offered but there is still no firm date by which operations are expected to begin.

In other business, the trustees:

- Approved the recommended appointment of three new physicians to the hospital staff. Dr. Hugo Hernandez, a urologist, was appointed as an associate staff member, to take a seat on the permanent staff next year, while Dr. Joseph Robert Purita and Dr. Wesley King, both of Miami, were appointed to the emergency room staff, where they'll fill in on weekends.

- Learned that Charles Gadsden, an assistant dietitian, had been chosen Employee of the Year from among the Employees of the Month over the past year.

Lennon said Gadsden and his wife were being treated to an expense-paid weekend at Port St. Lucie. He said Gadsden was chosen for his all-around qualities as an employee.
